

Dear FCC Commissioners & Staff:

I really dont understand the need to restrict independent ISP providers from being able to distribute DSL, but I can tell that that would make my choices for availabe services limited.

I am not very fond of the quality of service i get from certain companies such as AOL, or Verizon, and others, and the thought of only being able to recieve DSL through one of these companies and other like them disturbs me. I am very happy with the service, quality, and Prices of independent ISP's. Iglou has always served me wELL and provide me with services that are great in quality and are very economically sound. To take away their right to provide a service such as DSL does not make much scence at all. I would really appreciate it if they and othe independent ISP's would be allowed to continue providing us with broadband services, i prefer recieving my services from them and do not see any reason to change any of that.

Sincerely,

Aaron Mabson
